

Content

Preface by David McLellan	ix
Foreword	xi
I. On the Reception of Marx in China Today	1
1. Introduction	1
2. The Party's Projected Interpretation of Marx	2
3. The Interpretations of Marx Approved by the Party	6
4. Scholars' Personal Interpretations of Marx Tolerated by the Party	7
5. Others	10
6. A Significant Blank	10
7. Conclusion	11
Notes	13
References	14
II. The Incomplete Transformation of Sinicized Marxism	16
1. Introduction	16
2. The De-theorization of Marxism in China	19
3. The De-liberalization of Marxism in China	22
4. Towards the Re-theorization and Re-liberalization of Sinicized Marxism	26
Notes	30
References	32
III. The Revelations in Marx's and Kang Youwei's Predictions on the Social Progress in China	34
1. Marx's Predictions about Chinese Social Progress	35
2. Kang Youwei's Prophecy of Chinese Development	38
3. Agreement and Reality: The Great Unity as the Ultimate Goal, the Well-off as the Current Task	44
4. A Few Revelations	46
Notes	50
References	51
IV. Why Do We Need Practical Wisdom?
A Chinese Lesson in the Process of Globalization	53
1. Introduction: Practical Wisdom and Its Chinese Researches	53
2. Aristotelian Concept of Practical Wisdom and Its Reconstructive Interpretation	56
3. The Crisis of China since the 1840s: From Regionalizing Practice to Globalizing Practice	57

4. A Chinese Lesson: Fetishizing Theoretical Wisdom in Globalizing Practice	61
5. The Twenty-First Century: An Age towards Practical Wisdom	64
6. Conclusion: The Definition and Meaning of Practical Wisdom	67
Notes	69
References	70
V. On the Globalization of Labor:
An Argument from a Marxist and a Chinese Perspective	74
1. Introduction: An Imbalanced Globalization	75
2. A Benchmark: The Ideal of Cosmopolitan Right and the Reality of the Globalization of Capital	77
3. Marx's Theory of Labor and Theory of World-history	80
4. The Globalization of Labor: The End of Capitalist Logic	83
5. A Suggestion: The Globalization of Labor as a Claim in International Relations	86
References	88
VI. Ecological Tension: Between Minimum and Maximum Changes	89
1. Three Conditions for Occurrence of Ecological Problems	89
2. The Essence of Ecological Problems	90
3. Two Contributing Factors to Ecological Problems: Population and GDP	92
4. Four Modes of Ecological Problems	93
5. Transferability of Ecological Problems according to Egoist Principles	94
6. The Root of the Ecological Problem in China: The Maximization of Change	95
7. Practical Wisdom: Balance in Tension	97
References	99